

HELIX SHOW AND TELL

Stan Yoder, The Crossing

WHY USE HELIX?

A LEGO DNA double helix structure is built on a blue baseplate. The structure is composed of yellow and blue LEGO bricks forming the sugar-phosphate backbone, and red, green, and blue bricks forming the nitrogenous base pairs. The helix is shown in a three-quarter view, spiraling upwards. The background is a blurred blue baseplate with scattered LEGO bricks.

- Event Calendar – Event Search

The image shows a screenshot of an event calendar application. The interface includes a top navigation bar with filters for 'All Campuses', dates (08/11/2025 to 12/31/2025), and a 'SHOW OPEN ONLY' button. The main content area displays a list of events for August 2025. A central diagram overlay, resembling a pyramid, illustrates a four-level hierarchy of software solutions. The levels are: 1. Turnkey Rock RMS (bottom, dark blue), 2. Blocks and Workflows (teal), 3. Lava Applications (green), and 4. Custom C# and Obsidian (top, light green). An orange curved arrow points from level 1 up to level 4, indicating a progression or choice. Each level is accompanied by a circular icon: a box for level 1, a grid for level 2, a gear for level 3, and a code block for level 4. The event list on the left includes dates like Aug 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, and 18, with titles such as 'Corporate Faith Speaker Series', 'College Gro', 'Outreach | S', 'Youthcross', 'Outreach | F', 'Crossing Ri', 'Summer Social', and 'Outreach | Sort Clothing and Deliver Donations'. The right side of the interface shows a detailed view of the 'Corporate Faith Speaker Series' event, including the speaker's name, location, and a description.
